

Scott Cook currently serves as the Vice-President of the Mid Atlantic Athletic Trainer's Association (MAATA). Prior to this, he had served three years as the MAATA Annual Meeting Planner.

He currently serves as an athletic trainer for the Sentara-Rockingham (SRMH) Orthopedics and Sports Medicine Medical Group. In this role, he functions as a Physician Extender. He also serves as a clinical outreach athletic trainer for the Eastern Mennonite School.

Prior to his tenure at SRMH, he served as an Associate Athletic Trainer at James Madison University (JMU) In this role he served as the Head Football Athletic Trainer, where he was fortunate to be part of two National Championship Teams in 2004 and 2016. He also oversaw Sports Medicine Services for Cheerleading, Women's Swimming and Men's Tennis during his tenure. He now serves as the Football Medical Spotter for JMU home football games. He also served as a Clinical instructor in the James Madison University Undergraduate Athletic Training Educational Program.

Scott received his B.S from West Virginia University and a M.S. from Purdue University. After earning his M.S. degree, he served as an assistant athletic trainer at the University of Notre Dame and the University of Illinois before coming to JMU. Altogether, he has over 30 years of intercollegiate athletic training experience.

Scott has presented on numerous Athletic training topics at the state and district level. He has volunteered at the State, District and National level, in a variety of ways, including serving on state committees, BOC examiner and volunteering for high school athletic events.

In 2022 he was awarded the MAATA District Directors and Athletic Training Service Award. He was also awarded the Virginia Athletic Trainers Association (VATA) Clinical Athletic Trainer of the Year in 2023.

He and his wife Jini reside in Harrisonburg, VA, and are the parents of daughter Peyton and son Wyatt